A Return to the Books

An Ohio University summer program sheds light on the question concerning a professor's effectiveness in teaching experienced executives.

THE MORNING was hot but the room air conditioned. Around the table sat a group of executives representing business and industrial concerns across the country. At the head of the long table, a university professor directed the discussion. The problem of the morning: An actual business problem in labor relations, drawn from the experience of an actual company.

At times the discussion became heated. More often it was calm, orderly, despite a wide gulf of opinions. When the session closed, nothing had been resolved, but many things had been dissected.

The scene was a class of the 1960 Executive Development Program. Participants, except for the professor, were men of 10 to 15 years' experience with some of the nation's leading corporations. Assembled for four weeks on the Ohio University campus — July 10 to August 6 — they were attending special classes based on a cross section view of management.

Their presence on the campus personified an oft-debated question: "What can an experienced executive learn about his own business in a college classroom?"

Or, as the question is sometimes presented, "What can a college professor, who spends his time on a campus, teach a man who has gained practical experience in actual business competition?"

Stated either way, the question is usually a pat bet to form the nucleus of an explosive discussion. When this happens, pens, it is an equally sound wager that alumni of the six-year-old Executive Development Program at OU will be defending the cause of the campus.

One participant, division manager for one of the country's largest business organizations, expresses a firm opinion:

"I'm really an enthusiastic supporter of the program. Each of us has his own way of doing things. Here we discover that someone else might have a better way. We also get a general picture of different phases of management. We learn a lot from professors and from each other."

Delving more deeply into the specific question of a professor teaching an experienced executive, an engineer for a large industry says:

"There isn't any question in my mind now. A man in industry can learn a lot from a college professor. Don't forget, a man becomes familiar with his own particular situation. The professor is a specialist in an entire area. For instance, if he is in accounting, his vision encompasses the over-all field of accounting. In contrast, a company accountant naturally tends to see things only in the light of his own organization, or his own job. I didn't know the first thing about labor laws, for instance, until I attended EDP. If I had to sum up the benefits of the program, I guess I would say it is extremely broadening, although we did get down to specifics."

Benefits are Reciprocal

Ten professors who took part in the program return the complimentary pass by insisting that benefits are reciprocal.

"We get a real refresher course in trends throughout the nation, new methods being used, and company philosophies," explains William Fichthorn, associate professor of finance.

Objectives of the EDP, sponsored by the University's College of Commerce, are summed up in these statements from the three men.

The program is not intended to help men toward a chance for advancement. They already have earned that chance. Each was selected by his company because he is slated for a top position in management.

The objective of the Executive Development Plan, Dean Paul L. Noble of the College of Commerce explains, is to give these men "an understanding of the interrelationship of various business functions, as well as to explore management techniques of the future."

Decisions Become Widespread

As he advances to the top of management, the engineer, for instance, is no longer concerned just with his engineering department, or the design of equipment. He finds himself making decisions on subjects of financial control, production, distribution, human relations, collective bargaining, and general business policy.

These represent the six areas covered in the business classes of the 1960 EDP. All are conducted by the case study and discussion method.

A typical morning for EDP students begins with an 8:00 a.m. class in financial control. After a 9:30 coffee break, the men divide into small groups to work on "management decision simulation" projects, presented as a competitive game. From 10:00 until 11:30 they are back in the classroom. Then they have half an hour of individual study before lunch.

In the afternoon they return to business discussion sessions for an hour, then attend rapid reading or public speaking classes. At 3:30 they are finished until a social hour that precedes dinner. But the work day is not finished. From

8:15 until 10:00 they have group study sessions in Voigt Hall, where all are housed. Some nights this study is centered on the management decision simulation.

Introduced last year, the decision simulation game has become a highlight of EDP. The simulation is set up for teams of three to six men, each group acting as a company. All teams start with a given amount of assets, plant capacity and percentage share of the market.

During the four weeks they are free to manipulate their companies as they see fit, making decisions on price, production, marketing expenditures, research and development, plant expansion and sale of existing facilities, with the objective of maximizing long-run profits. Each day represents a year of company operation.

All decisions are turned in to an umpire who processes the data by use of pre-determined procedures and forms. These forms have been carefully prepared according to statistics of probability. When the project ends, the company, or team, with the best over-all financial picture wins.

Walter Fleishhacker, who co-developed the simulation together with Professor E. T. Hellebrandt, directed the game this year. A 1958 graduate of OU (MBA, '60), he was on leave of absence from the Corning Fibre Box Corporation, Corning, N. Y., to serve on the EDP staff.

Executive Development Staff

The Executive Development Program doesn't win a conclusive victory in the debate on continuing college education. But executives of more than 40 companies are willing to present strong arguments for the affirmative side.

EVENING STUDY HOUR in the dormitory brings together Richard Eddy (back to camera), Ira Good, Darrell Fox, and Professor Ralph Beckert. Frequently the dormitory discussions became intense enough to last well into the night.

GORDON K. BUSH, '24, chairman of the candidate selection committee, has served on the OU Board of Trustees since 1929. Publisher of the Athens Messenger, he has been board chairman and has headed the planning, building and lands purchase committee.

DR. AMOS C. ANDERSON, professor of psychology, has been a member of the Ohio University faculty since 1925. He earned bachelor's and master's degrees at the University of Michigan and the Ph.D. from the Yale Graduate School.

JOHN W. GALBREATH, '20, well known Columbus realtor and owner of the Pittsburgh Pirates baseball team, has been a member of the board of trustees since 1941. He too has served as chairman of the board and has headed various trustee committees.

EDGAR SHOEMAKER, '26, current president of the OU Alumni Association, is an officer and controller of the American Potash and Chemical Company. He was on the alumni board of directors one year before being elected president in June.

EDWIN L. KENNEDY, '27, a partner in Lehman Brothers investment house, New York City, was appointed to the Board of Trustees last year. He has served as president of the OU Alumni Association and currently is board chairman of the Ohio University Fund, Inc.

You Can

SOMEWHERE at this very moment, reading a magazine as you are doing, riding in an automobile, working in an office, attending a meeting, writing, or possibly enjoying one of his infrequent periods of relaxation is the man who will become president of Ohio University next year.

No one knows who the man is. He doesn't know himself that he is destined to be the successor to Dr. John C. Baker. He hasn't applied for the position, because protocol dictates that no man formally apply for a college presidency.

But the man will be located. He will be found through the combined efforts of alumni, faculty and trustees of Ohio University. You may be the person who provides his name.

Final selection of the next president will rest with the Ohio University board of trustees. Candidates, however, will be nominated by a committee representing trustees, faculty and alumni. Members of that committee, pictured on this page, will depend a great deal on information furnished them from the groups they represent.

As alumni spokesman, Edgar Shoemaker has outlined procedure for participation from members of the Alumni Association. This procedure is contained in his letter at the right.

First official meeting of the five-man committee is being held this month. Meanwhile, each member is doing individual work gathering information about possible candidates.

A faculty committee is being appointed to accept recommendations from faculty members. Organized through the faculty advisory council, this group will carry out preliminary screening and pass on recommendations to Dr. Amos Anderson, faculty representative on the board's special committee.

The committee itself will have only a few full meetings. Preliminary work must be carried out through individual efforts.

Gordon Bush, chairman of the committee has set the goal for final selection as "early in 1961", because the man who qualifies for the presidency of Ohio University, "undoubtedly will have commitments that would make it impossible to leave his present position immediately."

Members of the committee feel they can meet their goal with active assistance from alumni and faculty, particularly in submitting names of candidates whom they consider top qualified men for the position.

Trustee action in establishing the five-man committee represents the first time alumni have been officially represented on a committee for selection of an Ohio University president.

When President Baker was chosen in 1945, submission of names was encouraged, but no definite procedure was outlined. The committee considered several hundred candidates before working its way to the final selection of Dr. Baker.

Chairman Bush envisions a momentous task ahead for his committee. Impetus must come from recommendations by alumni, faculty and friends. It will then be the job of the committee to study all information carefully and eventually talk personally with the top candidates.

Dear Fellow Alumni

During the past sixteen years the Alumni Association has grown both in stature and in service to Ohio University. Credit for this is due to many persons, but over-all the factor of a friendly university administration has been most important. A recent example of this was the appointment of the Association's President to the five man selection committee by the Board of Trustees. The committee will recommend candidates for the office of President of Ohio University to succeed Dr. John C. Baker upon his retirement next year. By virtue of being President of the Association, I have the honor of serving on this committee with Dr. Amos Anderson, the faculty representative, and the Board of Trustees representatives, John Galbreath, Edwin Kennedy, and Gordon Bush, the Committee Chairman.

Selecting candidates to succeed a man who has given great leadership and prestige to our Alma Mater and encouragement to our Alumni program will not be an easy task, but recognition of the accomplishments in recent years, the challenge of future goals and our University's great heritage should attract many energetic, personable and experienced candidates.

As your representative on this committee, I will devote energy and time to the committee's job of placing such candidates before the Board of Trustees and you can help by following the procedure listed below.

Submit to me immediately the name, title, and age of a person you believe should be considered.

Your letter will be acknowledged and possibly you will be further requested to obtain biographical data, a photo, and to send your personal opinion and comments. Follow-up on the availability and background of the candidate, personal interviews, etc., will be done by the committee, but association members may be asked to help in this process where they have personal interest and knowledge.

The job of the committee is to screen candidates and make recommendations to the Board of Trustees and the final selection is the rightly placed responsibility of the Board. Your help and your adherence to the procedure explained above will assure the committee of a thorough and dignified plan of processing the candidates.

I look forward to hearing from you.

Sincerely yours,

President, OU Alumni Association

Pete Winter's Drawing Pencil Sends
A Syndicated Cartoon Character to OU

PETE WINTER, '55

SHOULD YOU STOP and pick up a paper at the newsstand glance at the comic section. You may find yourself gazing at the art work of an Ohio University graduate.

Over 100 newspapers in the United States carry the cartoon strip, "The Toodles," illustrated by Pete Winter, '55.

Winter is the first OU graduate to receive national recognition as a cartoonist.

The strip, as Winter describes it, "concerns itself primarily with the adventures of the small twins, Penny and Pat, the older brother, Larry, an intern, and Sally, a cute college girl . . . who, since I have been doing the strip, is going to OU."

Winter first heard the strip's writers were looking for a new artist via the grapevine. At that time he and his wife, Margie, were living in Laguna Beach, "a small, charming art colony about 70 miles south of Los Angeles."

He wrote to the writers, Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Baer, in Beverly Hills and landed the job.

A Chicago Sun-Times Syndicate feature, the strip appears daily and Sunday. It was created by the Baers in December, 1941.

Winter is the third artist to draw the strip. The first artist handled it for 17 years.

In doing "The Toodles," the former OU student is given free run on the art work. He can experiment and attempt new techniques and is permitted to sign his name to the strip.

This takes him out of the status of a "ghost" artist, and makes him eligible for membership in the National Cartoonists Society.

"The big advantage of having signing rights," says Winter, "is that my name will become familiar to the syndicates."

Coming up soon is a college sequence and one can easily guess where the college setting is . . . Ohio University, of course. Winter explains, "All the buildings will be of OU and various names in the copy should also prove familiar to alumni and students."

A Call from the Service

The young artist left OU in 1955 tinkering with a ROTC cartoon character, "Peter Victor." National newspaper syndicate in Chicago almost took it. However, the armed service made its call.

In June, 1956, Winter reported for active duty with the Air Force. After "the unbelievably hectic existence of pilot training," he received his wings in August, 1957, and reported to Luke Air Force Base for gunnery training.

While there he came in contact with Gen. Robert L. Scott, author of "God Is My Co-Pilot," whom Winter had met while visiting the Pentagon under the auspices of the OU ROTC department a few years before.

With General Scott's encouragement, thoughts began to jell on a new strip with an AF theme. Following completion of combat training at Luke AFB, upgrading at Nellis AFB and subsequent stationing at Langley AFB as a combat qualified tactical jet fighter pilot, Winter began to put together the new strip attempt.

The Air Force took a great deal of interest in the strip and he received letters of praise and support from many generals, plus promises of unlimited assistance.

But a try at a New York syndicate failed and the strip was grounded. It was dubbed "too much like 'Steve Canyon,' 'Terry' and 'Johnny Hazard.' "

A second try was made . . . this time making the lead character a space medic in charge of a small group of officers.

The syndicates turned the strip down as "science fiction" and two months later the astronaut program hit the papers.

"'Space Medic' could have been a beautiful scoop!" Winter recalls mournfully. One of the first strip's lines was a speech by a doctor in which he informed his colleagues, "One of you gentlemen will very likely be the first man on the moon."

Following his release from the Air Force, Winter and his wife settled in Laguna Beach where he did free lance advertising art until he picked up the "Toodles" job.

Winter's wife is a concert pianist, a graduate of the University of Illinois and has done some modeling. Their two daughters are Kimberly, the oldest, four years old, and Kristin, 2 months old.

The Winters have recently bought a little house along the coast of the Pacific where they "are having a bit of a love affair with Laguna Beach."

AT THE OLD BALL GAME

ALUMNI and guests are cordially invited to attend alumni affairs planned for 1960 football games away from home, and coffee hours held in the northwest corner room of Peden Stadium following each home game. Events scheduled for remaining out-of-town games are as follows:

October 8 OU vs. Boston University

Pre game buffet luncheon at 11:30 a.m. in Beacon Street Motel, 1200 Beacon Street, Boston. Roundup in same room for refreshments after game.

October 15 OU vs. Xavier University

Roundup from 4 to 7 p.m. at Cash Conference Room, Logan Hall, on Xavier campus.

October 29 OU vs. Western Michigan

Alumni affair to be announced at the game.

November 12 OU vs. Bowling Green

Pre-game luncheon in BGU students union on campus. Reservations required (contact Lois Ann and Hayden Crabtree, 3200 Clough Street, Bowling Green).

PRESIDENTS STARCHER AND BAKER

Starcher Speaks to 352

THE LARGEST summer graduating class in recent years heard Dr. George W. Starcher, president of the University of North Dakota, speak at commencement exercises August 20.

Dr. Starcher, former teacher and dean at Ohio University addressed 352 graduates in Memorial Auditorium. His topic, "Where Tradition Meets the Future," was based on observations of modern man's struggle for individuality in an organized world.

Included in the graduation group was Allan L. Ward, first recipient of a doctoral degree in speech from OU. He also is the second person to receive a doctorate from OU. The first was Dr. Joseph Denham, who received the Ph.D in chemistry in 1959.

Dr. Ward has been a Teaching Fellow at OU for the past three years, after receiving BA and MA degrees from the University of Arizona.

Bachelor's degrees at the summer commencement numbered 268, master's degrees 83.

Six Leave ROTC Staff

SIX MEMBERS of Air Force ROTC Detachment 650 at Ohio University have left this summer.

They are Lt. Colonel Caleb P. Moberly, transferred to Hancock Field, New York; Captain Julian P. Hopkins, transferred to Air Research and Development Command, Sunnyvale, Calif.; Captain Karl L. Wiegand, transferred to Ohio State.

Captain Thomas B. Simmerman, resigned to become a pilot for Proctor and Gamble Co., Cincinnati; Master Sergeant Levoud Cargill, transferred to Wright-Patterson AFB; and Staff Sergeant Frank Sincoskie, transferred to Carswell AFB, Fort Worth, Texas.

M. Fuller and Dr. Donald A. Green of the Ohio University faculty, Paul Holcomb of the Bedford, O., public schools and several OU doctoral students in guidance.

Two Receive Study Grants

DR. WILLIAM B. Smith and Dr. Charles A. Randall received fellowships for study and research during this school year.

Dr. Smith has already started his work at Texas Christian University. He is researching in the field of organic chemistry for nine months under a grant from the Robert A. Welch Foundation of Ft. Worth, Texas.

Dr. Randall will leave Nov. 30 for an eight week tour of universities and laboratories under an Organization for European Economic Cooperation Senior Visiting Fellowship. He will be studying cosmic rays and high energy particle physics.

85 Per Cent Processed

PRE-COLLEGE counseling ended August 5 with 85 per cent of Ohio University's incoming freshmen processed.

Counseling consisted of four weeks, one in June and three covering the end of July and first of August. Prospective freshmen took English proficiency tests, the Ohio State Psychological Examination and counseled for classes for the fall term.

Cady's Book Reprinted

A REPRINT of Ohio University Professor John F. Cady's book, "A History of Modern Burma," features a 34-page supplement reviewing developments in Burma from late 1958 to the present. It is published by Cornell University.

Appel Goes to Nigeria

MARGUERITE APPEL, assistant professor of secretarial studies, was the 11th member chosen to be on the United States teaching team in Nigeria for the next two years.

She is in Nigeria with five other Ohio University faculty members.

They are Dr. Gilford W. Crowell, assistant dean of the College of Education; Dr. Edwin G. Charle, Jr., assistant professor of business administration; Margaret Felsinger, associate professor of education; Mary Leonard, assistant professor of school design; and Dr. Wilma K. Miller, associate professor of physical education.

Summer Events Host 4500

NEARLY 4500 people from all walks of life were on the Ohio University campus this summer attending 28 workshops, conferences and institutes.

Twelve hundred high school boys were here for Buckeye Boys' State in June. The High School Publications Workshop and the Ohio School of Banking hosted a total of 2500 participants.

Among others there was a two-week Music Clinic-Workshop and a three-week High School Science Workshop.

Two Departments Merged

TWO OHIO University departments, German-Russian and Romance Languages, have been combined into the Department of Modern Languages.

The newly created department is chairwoman by Dr. B. A. Renkenberger, formerly chairman of the Department of Romance Languages. Dr. Morton Benson, chairman of the Department of German and Russian, accepted a position at the University of Pennsylvania.

FIRST DOCTORATE IN SPEECH in history of OU was presented in August to Allan L. Word (second from right). With him (l to r) are Dr. Earl Seigfred, dean of the College of Fine Arts; Dr. Loren Staats, professor of speech; and Dr. Donald R. Clippinger, dean of Graduate College.

NEW STAFF MEMBERS of the Ohio Alumnus magazine, and of the OU Office of Information are Assistant Editor Joann Conover, '59, and Photographer Dona Vibberts, '54. Miss Conover returns to the University after a year as women's page editor for the Oberlin News-Tribune (edited by Don Pease, '53). Mr. Vibberts has served as a photographic officer in the Air Force and chief photographer for the Ohio Department of Highway Safety, since graduation from OU.

MISS EDGINGTON

Stopover Australia

A trip around the world
by an Ohio University graduate is highlighted by six months "down under."

Joann Conover

DO ALL Americans have new cars? . . . revolvers in top dresser drawers? Do most American girls and boys belong to gangs or are beatniks? How bad is the Negro problem?

These were just a few of the many questions directed to Ohio University graduate, Miss Virginia Edgington, '58, during her six-month stay in Australia this past winter.

Miss Edgington was one of four chosen in Ohio to participate in the International Farm Youth Exchange (IFYE). She was in Australia from Nov. 12, 1959, to April 30, 1960.

Despite the above questions and the many more directed her way, Miss Edgington "doesn't think they (the Australians) have as many misconceptions about us as we have about them."

On every Australian radio newscast there is at least fifteen minutes devoted to strictly American news. In every home one can find numerous American magazines and American movies are shown in many of their theaters.

"It's true they need some enlightening" the OU graduate admits, . . . but how many Americans have Australian magazines in their homes and constantly read and hear about Australia?

Understanding People

The objective of Miss Edgington's Australian IFYE visit is the belief that understanding people is the foundation of world peace.

The IFYE program was built on the idea that through giving American farm youth an opportunity to learn another way of life by living it, they will understand the problems and attitudes of rural people in other parts of the world.

Miss Edgington lived with 20 official host families and 3 unofficial host families during her stay. She participated in their everyday life, worked with them and "shared their joys and sorrows."

As her letter of introduction says "It is our sincere hope that, in the spirit of this Exchange, the bearer of this letter will be accepted, not as a guest nor as a hired laborer, but rather as a member of the host family."

"Australians don't put emphasis on working at all," remarked Miss Edgington. They had a high regard for Eisenhower and "wanted to know more about my home life, Ohio University, my conservation experiences and teaching. They weren't too much interested in our government, politics or surplus food problem."

For a population the size of Ohio (10 million) spread over an area as large as the United States, the IFYE exchangee reflects "they have made a tremendous amount of progress."

Television is making its debut there. Most families have running water, stoves, refrigerators and wall-to-wall carpeting.

What struck Miss Edgington as unique in an Australian home was the profuse use of color. In the kitchen each cupboard was a different color and the panels in garage doors were painted in a similar fashion. When asked why, their reply was, "Isn't that what Americans do?"

She attributed this allegiance to the fact that Australians feel they owe their freedom to the United States because the Japanese during World War II were right on their door step.

Host Families Volunteered

The IFYE exchangee emphasized that she was not placed in "better" homes. All of her host families volunteered through their rural organizations and were not screened and selected as is done in the US for incoming exchangees.

Australians speak in thousands of acres in terms of a farm, where Americans speak in hundreds. Therefore Miss Edgington found that when she spoke of her 595-acre farm at home they weren't too impressed with the size.

"I was there in a time of drought," relates the exchangee. It was the worse drought since 1914.

Australia has only two year-round flowing rivers and in 1959 only two inches of rain fell in some areas.

Miss Edgington said she found the dust storm the most fascinating thing she saw. "I pulled my chair up to the window and just watched. If it had been 100 degrees cooler and white, it could have been a snow storm."

The heat in Australia is dry and the climate could be comparable to a summer in Kansas and Nebraska, along the wheat belt. Wool is its principle product and research in all phases of wool production is very complete.

Australia, the size of the United States, is divided into six states. Miss Edgington traveled and visited in two of these states, Victoria and South Australia.

In a little loose leaf book the IFYE exchangee has neatly recorded her experiences, impressions and all of her 64 talks, along with questions asked, during her six months there.

Most of these talks were to Rotary Clubs, schools, churches, the Country Women's Association, Rural Youth Clubs and Young Farmer's Clubs.

Stays at Two Camps

The exchangee also spent one week in two camps during her stay. One was the Sydney Show Camp in South Australia and the other the Young Farmer's Camp in Victoria.

The IFYE program was started in 1948 by a group of 4-H clubs in New York. It has grown steadily in the past 12 years to where it has sent about 2500 exchangees.

The program is conducted cooperatively by the National 4-H Club Foundation, the Extension Service of the US Department of Agriculture and the Land-Grant Colleges.

It is supported by contributions from rural organizations, foundations and educational institutions on state and national levels. On the state level $1100 must be put up for every person sent. The balance of the money needed is supplied on the national level.

Encouraged to Apply

Miss Edgington applied to participate in the IFYE program upon the encouragement of a fellow teacher at Frankfort High School in Frankfort, O.

She had returned from five weeks that summer of studying conservation at the Ohio Conservation Laboratory in Carroll County . . . and during her work took detailed slides.

Many groups in the area found her talk and slides extremely interesting and it was at one of these talks that she was encouraged to try for the IFYE Program.

An IFYE applicant applies through his or her country agricultural extension agent. They must be single, between the ages of 20 and 30, have at least a high school education, a rural background (preferably current), a working knowledge of rural organizations and an interest in people.

Miss Edgington was in the process of completing requirements for a bachelor's degree in education at Ohio University when she applied. She had been teaching previously on a two-year certificate.

Her home is in Ross County near Frankfort, O. She lives with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Edgington.

Australia was the IFYE exchangee's first choice. She believes she was the only one out of the 25 who got her first choice.

Miss Edgington went in the "winter" phase of the IFYE program. Approximately 25 are also sent in each of the other three phases, spring, summer and fall.

Of the 25 that went to the winter phase with her, two went to Jordan, two to Australia, two to New Zealand, one to the Union of South Africa, four to Pakistan and 15 to Latin and South American countries.

Must Be in Summer Season

Persons must pick a country that is in its summer season during the phase he is attending, comments Miss Edgington.

In response to the IFYE program, approximately 110 people from other countries come into the US during the six-month period of spring, summer and fall.

Prior to their trips all 25 exchangees spent a week in Washington, D. C. for orientation. They were briefed on how to handle various situations and questions concerning religion, people, agriculture, etc.

Travels With Three Others

The first leg of Miss Edgington's journey was a trip across the southern United States to San Francisco with three other exchangees. The foursome sailed from San Francisco Oct. 24 and Miss Edgington arrived in Sydney, Australia, Nov. 12.

On the return trip the foursome grouped together again and come home by way of Ceylon, Bombay, Suez, Athens (Greece). They visited France, Switzerland and then sailed from South Hampton, England, on the Queen Mary on June 14, 1960.

A final consultation and evaluation session in Washington rounded out the trip. Miss Edgington arrived home June 20 at 3:30 a.m. exhausted & tired . . . but with the inspiration to tell all of what she saw and heard about another people in another land.

VIRGINIA EDGINGTON talks to Australian school children, telling them about 4-H Clubs in the United States. For her visit the children wore their everyday clothing. They usually wear uniforms.

Bobcat Roundup

Sept. 24 — Toledo*
Oct. 1 — At Kent State*
Oct. 8 — At Boston University
Oct. 15 — At Xavier
Oct. 22 — Miami* (Homecoming)
Oct. 29 — At Western Michigan*
Nov. 5 — Marshall*
Nov. 12 — At Bowling Green*
Nov. 19 — Southern Illinois

THIS IS Bill Hess's third year as head football coach at his alma mater and he may have one of the best Bobcat teams in a quarter of a century.

His first team had a 5-4 record and last year this was improved to 7-2 as the Bobcats took second place in the Mid-American Conference. With only three lettermen missing from that team, evidence points to possibility of an even better record in 1960.

The 1959 team's record was the best posted by an OU team since 1938 when an identical 7-2 mark was established. It was back in 1935 that OU had its last undefeated football team with an 8-0 mark.

This year, a rugged 10-game schedule confronts Hess and his talented staff of assistants. A total of 23 lettermen return from 1959. Most pre-season forecasters are predicting the Bobcats will win the league title. If they do, it will be the first OU football title in the league since 1953.

But many things will have to go just right for the Bobcats to do it. OU is not the only conference school with a large number of lettermen returning. Bowling Green, last year's champion, has 22 back, and Miami has 20.

Reviewing his team, Hess sees better overall team speed with the best size for an OU team for many years. "We are strong in the middle of the line and in running backs," Hess points out. Center Dick Greeni, Guard Joe Dean—the co-captains—and Fullback Bob Brooks and Halfback Bob Harrison were all first team conference selections in 1959.

COACHES HEFFELINGER, RICHEY, HESS,
HINDMAN, KAPPES

"Size is an asset of this team, and we can definitely hold our own with other conference schools in this department this season," Hess continues.

Hess plans to liberally use the new substitution rule which allows him to substitute one man every play without it counting as a time-out. Consequently, he is developing certain individuals as offensive and defensive specialists.

He has four lettermen at end spots, Jim Massarelli, New Philadelphia; George Belu, Lorain, the starters; Jack Kiewit, Youngstown, and Pat Smith, Athens. Ken Smith, Euclid, and John Trevis, Youngstown, are sophomore standouts.

Three lettermen at tackle are Mike Kielkovicz, Cleveland; Jon Peters, Sistersville, W. Va., and Ted Stute, Enon. Also available here is the only sophomore likely to make the starting lineup, Dick Schulz, Columbus. Kielkovicz is the other starter.

Guard has the best depth with five lettermen, Co-Captain Joe Dean, Archbald, Pa.; Ken Fisher, Massillon, the starters; Allen Miller, Canal Winchester; Jim Pugh, Marietta, and Tom Keating, Westerville. Joe Lopez, Massillon, is a sophomore standout.

Center, of course, has the amazing Dick Greeni, co-captain from Akron, and already a draft choice of the Cleveland Browns, and Ron Lyon as his understudy, both lettermen.

Quarterback lettermen are Dave Wagner, East Sparta, the possible offensive starter, and Otis Wagner, Greenfield, the defensive starter. Sophomore standouts are Bob Babbitt, Bexley; Roger Merb, Portsmouth, and Tom Widdoes, Athens, son of the OU athletic director.

Halfback is manned by five lettermen, Bob Harrison, St. Louis, Mo.; John Dickason, Wellington; Clyde Thomas, Bellaire; John Balough, Chillicothe, and Jim Foley, Lorain. Fullback has the indestructible Bob Brooks, Winchester, Ky.; Dave Archibald, Massillon, as the lettermen.

OU's basketball hopes for 1960-61 received a jolt early in September when All-Conference Center Howard Jolliff decided to cast his lot with the professional Los Angeles Lakers. It was an extremely tough decision for Jolliff to make and he pondered it for three months, accepting the $10,000 no-cut contract on the final deadline date. More about this will be discussed in subsequent Roundup stories.

First Ohio University graduate ever to compete in the Olympic Games, Les Carney, '59, won a silver medal in the 200 meter dash when he finished inches behind Italy's Livio Berruti, who set an Olympic record of 20.5 for the event. Unquestionably the greatest track man in Bobcat history, Carney holds the Mid-American 220 record (20.7), and has run the 100 yard dash in 9.6 against Mid-Am competition. He broke the tape 14 times in three years of dual competition with Miami University and set an NCAA meet record of 20.8 for the 220 yard dash. Since graduation he has been working as a retail buyer for the M. O'Neill Company of Akron and running as a member of the Cleveland Striders, out of Akron. Last summer Les finished second in the 200 meter dash at the Pan American Games in Chicago. This summer he qualified for the Olympic Games with a third, then hit the high point of his career by coming within a whisker of a gold medal at Rome.

The Change Was Unique

By Joann Conover

LILLIAN Lott was the typical American coed in her cotton jumper and crisp white blouse. But . . . with a quick change to her native Liberian costume she seemed taller, older and twice as intriguing.

In excellent English Lillian related how she and another Liberian girl, Esther, came to the United States eight years ago with Pentecost missionary, Miss Beatrice Lott, and became her adopted daughters.

Lillian, a freshman this summer at Ohio University, was studying in a Liberian mission school under Miss Lott. When she expressed a desire to come to the United States to school, Miss Lott gave her a helping hand.

The trio arrived in Boston in June of 1952. From there they traveled to New York and several other cities where Miss Lott lectured, before settling in Cleveland at 10103 Westchester Ave.

Lillian started the fifth grade at the Seventh Day Adventist School that fall.

Her aptitude to learn quickly afforded her the chance to skip the sixth grade and go on to the seventh. She entered Lutheran High School on the eastside of Cleveland in 1955 and graduated in 1959.

"Once I had an idea I wanted to be a nurse," comments Lillian. What did she do about it? She took a job as a nurse's aid at the Huron Road Hospital right after graduation.

For nearly a year she received an insight into the life of a nurse. Did she change her mind? Yes . . . now she says, "I hope to be an elementary school teacher."

Furthermore, Lillian plans to return to her African country and teach in a mission school near her home village, Tugbake, in the southern tip of Liberia.

Lillian hasn't seen her parents or younger brother for over eight years. She says, "Some summer I'd like to go home."

Lillian's father is a rice farmer. Rice being Liberia's main food, she says everyone is a rice farmer.

Her brother, Willy, is now attending a mission school near their village.

Although English is the official language of Liberia, Lillian can speak Grebol, which is the dialect native to her tribe.

Liberians are members of about 27 different tribes. The basic distinction between them is dialect and, in some cases, stature.

Lillian explains that in some parts of the country, people are tall and in others short.

Monrovia is the capital city of Liberia and the country's government is patterned after the United States. "We also use American money," comments Lillian.

In comparing the United States to Liberia, Lillian stated that one reason she likes the US is, "that girls have an opportunity; if they want to go to school they can."

Lillian noticed the humidity is different here in the United States. She says it's a dryer heat in Liberia.

Liberia has only two seasons . . . a hot season and a rainy season. The hot season runs approximately between July and March with December being the hottest month of the year. The rainy season is generally between April and June.

Lillian likens a normal day and night in Liberia to one in Los Angeles. She says the days are hot and the nights are cold.

As far as a big city is concerned, in reference to Cleveland, Lillian says, "I love it!" She mentioned the multitude of people downtown and how quickly they go about their work.

THE OHIO ALUMNUS

Explosion in Hollywood

AN OHIO University graduate who has already conquered the East is launching an all-out attack on the West. Many of his friends are certain he is powered by nuclear explosion. Others maintain he is really three men, all of whom look alike and go by the name of Richard O. Linke.

Whichever the case may be, the Linke energy has just been detonated in Hollywood. But the fallout will be coast-to-coast, enveloping television, motion pictures and night clubs.

The 1941 OU grad, who rose through newspaper, radio and record ranks to emerge with his own New York personal management firm (Richard O. Linke Associates), moved this summer to California where he has offices on the Desilu Studio lot.

The New York office, still in full operation, is left in the capable hands of Dick's assistant, Mel Shayne, who graduated from OU in 1955. Mel continues to handle such personalities as Tommy Leonetti, Georgie Kaye, Terri Stevens, Margaret Ann and the Ernie Mariani Trio, and Dow Finsterwald.

Pianist Mariani, '41, and Golfer Finsterwald, '52 are also alumni of OU, as is Mariani's drummer, Jim Kerwin, '53.

Linke's decision to move West was sparked by the success of his number one star, Andy Griffith, with whom he is a partner in the Grifflink Corp. After Broadway successes in "No Time For Sergeants" and "Destry Rides Again," intersticed with motion picture and TV performances, "Decon" Andy goes on network television beginning this month, in a regular show called, appropriately, The Andy Griffith Show.

DICK AND ANDY

Associate producer of the series, filmed on the Desilu lot, is Richard O. Linke. In addition, Grifflink owns 50 percent of the show. The other half is owned by Danny Thomas and his producers.

Meanwhile, the ebullient OU alum has other ambitions in Hollywood. He is personally handling a young actor named Bob McQuain, in addition to giving his other clients stronger representation on the Coast.

One of the brightest hopes is Margaret Ann and the Ernie Mariani Trio. As star of a group called Margaret Ann & The Ja-Das, the young singer appeared with Perry Como three times and on the Pat Boone Show 10 times last year, as well as in night clubs across the country.

Now she sings in Mariani's group, with an eye toward success in the Nevada-California territory.

Maestro Mariani is the same smiling, talented, 100-per-cent-musician Bobcat who used to pause in the middle of a night club song to leap up on his piano and yell "Rock 'em Ohio."

With Dow Finsterwald, Linke Associates moves for the first time into the area of sports. For several months they have been busy showing prospective sponsor's the pilot of a proposed 156-show series, "Dow Finsterwald's Golf Tip of the Day." A five-minute daily film show, it is scheduled for network showing this fall.

Familiar Voice in Japan

A FAMILIAR Ohio University "voice" is now fast becoming a familiar "voice" to Japanese and Americans alike in the Far East.

David R. Chase, '59, now a 2nd Lieutenant in the Air Force, is "beeping out" American type programs to inhabitants of that Far Eastern land of Japan.

His position is specifically station manager of two stations in the Far East Network (FEN). The network is a group of ten stations in Japan and on Iwo Jima, staffed by the four armed services and operated from headquarters in Tokyo.

Many recent graduates and Ohio U. students will recall Chase's witicism on the early, early morning program, Yawn Patrol, over WOUB-AM.

In his AF position, Chase has approximately 20 military and 30 Japanese people under him. In fact, he has the distinction of being "the only Air Force officer at this post in Japan" . . . that it is in reality an Army post.

Chase's two stations are located on Hokkaido . . . a large island which makes up the northern part of Japan.

"As part of my duties," Chase says, "I sit on the network directors' board and form the policy for the FEN stations."

"Our network is programmed exactly like CBS and NBC, with big features such as 'Gunsmoke,' 'Johnny Dollar,' the 'Breakfast Club,' and Mutual's 'Baseball Game of the Day.' We operate 24 hours a day, everyday."

Stations in the network range in power from the lowest, 10 kilowatts, to 250 watts, what would be classified in the U.S. as a station. Chase adds, "All are on choice AM broadcast band frequencies."

STATION MANAGER CHASE

The stations are connected by a high quality land-line network, two way in nature. This means that all stations can originate programs for the network from their respective studio locations, as well as receive network offerings.

"The Air Force has been good to me," comments Chase, "After a year I am satisfied all the way."

He says, "I like it here and plan to extend and stay a full three years in the Far East. Anyone who comes to Japan and does not like it is absolutely crazy."

Chase, before going into the Air Force, was station manager of the All-Ohio University staffed station, WMPO, in Middleport, O. He was called into the service one month after the station first went on the air in August, 1959.

Presently Bill Miller, '59, is WMPO station manager. Others on the staff are Frank Youngworth, Jr., '59, sales director; Barbara Beal, '59, women's director; and Denny Steadman, '62, program director.
